SPECIAL COUNSEL

Phillip Silver, like the metal, is just as rare, just as valuable, and has plenty of industrious uses. After establishing the successful Johannesburg firm Phillip Silver and Associates, Phil simply couldn't keep still and set his eyes on Sydney to take on the challenge again and start from scratch.

Having already mastered the principles of Commercial and Business Law, Litigation, and Employment Law, Phil set out to delve into completely unfamiliar territory – Aussie Immigration Law. And in a few short years, he knows it like the back of his hand practicing at the highest echelon taking on tribunal reviews like it's second nature to him.

Phil fits well with the cool casual pace of Bondi. He doesn't walk into meetings wearing a stuffy suit, with a stern face, and an interrogatory tone. If you ever get to meet this guy, you might get your lawyer confused for an old mate. Expect a laugh or two from this bloke and real down to earth advice.

He's a "people person". Or at least he likes to think so. He takes pride in genuinely taking the time to listen to his clients so that he can step into their shoes and get a real handle on how his clients' concerns.

He also doesn't like the win or lose approach. He's practical and reasonable and likes to exhaust all commercial avenues before suiting up and sticking it to the man. We're not saying he's as cool as the Fonz, but hey he's pretty up there.

And in the words of this guy, remember "It's not the size of the law firm in the fight – it's the size of the fight in the law firm."
